portrayed. Genius that he was, his was also the genius of patient, earnest work.

The Stadium concerts for 1920 will end out in the city's musical history. Sixty-six concerts were represented. Rain interfered to a greater or less extent with the concerts. Fifteen of the programs were given entirely in the Great Hall of City College, three were given in the Stadium and four were cut short after intermission by thunder storms.

The Mystic Art Association, Inc. is holding its seventh annual exhibition at the Broadway School, Mystic-Corn. The exhibition includes a group of pictures from the Macbeth Galleries. Sherman Potts, Harry Lewis Raul, Kendall Saunders, Henry Bill Selden, G. Albert Thompson and E. Ballard Williams.

The firm name of Winton & Livingston, Inc., has been changed to Winton Concerts Inc., retaining the same office at 1401 Broadway. John Brown, president of the former corporation, is now president and managing director of the new firm.

Commonwealth Opera
Season Opens Sept. 6
Americanization and the propaganda for the English language, spoken and sung, were the keynote of the special meeting of the directors of the National Commonwealth English Opera Company and representatives of the Commonwealth Playhouse, held at the Lexington Theater on Monday afternoon, August 16.

In view of the large number of works to be studied for next season, including Wagner's "Lohengrin" and Verdi's "Metastasio," the choir school of the Metropolitan Opera Company, under the direction of Edoardo Gatti, is in session now. Instruction in the chorus school is absolutely free and admission is open to all young American singers possessing a good voice and a fair knowledge of music.

The committees of the National Commonwealth Center include Miss Sara Cleveland Clapp, Miss Virginia Potter, Harris A. Dunn, George Gordon Barth, Charles G. Burlington, Miss Edith I. Jardine, Mrs. Frank A. Blahnik, Mrs. Henry Oleschmer, William D. McGuire, Frank L. Polk and Samuel Mooney.

Ms. E. S. Coolidge, founder of the Berkshire Music Colony at Pittsfield, has again selected a prize for chamber music. This time the contest is confined to works for trio and the winning composition will be performed at next season's chamber music festival in Pittsfield by the Elshoff Trio.

On Tuesday evening, August 24, at 8 o'clock, the Goldman Concert Band, under the direction of Edwin Frank Goldman, will give a free concert for the benefit of the patients of Bellevue Hospital at the institution on Twenty-sixth Street and First Avenue. This will be the second concert given in the hospital this summer by this organization. The other concert was given at the Montefiore Home and Hospital in July.

Lexington Opera House
Engaged for Sunday Concerts
The Musical Bureau of America, Inc., has engaged the Lexington Opera House for the entire winter of 1920-21 season, and will hold concerts every Sunday evening, commencing with Sunday, September 13th.

Plans for next season's series of concerts under the auspices of Columbia University are now being made, and Mr. Goldman is arranging to provide more concerts for other hospitals and charitable institutions.
